INVESTMENT COMMENTARY

After a strong start to 2025, February saw some of the lustre of US exceptionalism fade, which weighed on global equity markets.

European stocks performed strongly on the back of optimism around a potential ceasefire between Russia/Ukraine combined with the hopes of fiscal spending following the German election while strong earnings helped to drive sentiment.

In this environment SKAGEN Focus performed well, outperforming global equity markets. Our strongest contributor to performance was the fund's largest position, Spanish stainless-steel producer Acerinox. Following its most recent acquisition, the company has substantial and underappreciated exposure to the US benefitting from recent trade tariffs, with about 80% of earnings from the region. Similar companies are trading at roughly double the valuation of Acerinox in the US. Austrian brick producer Wienerberger and Italian cement producer Cementir both delivered a solid set of earnings that propelled their share prices higher.

On the negative side, and given the many uncertainties in their respective operating environments, we received cautious but prudent guidance from both Canadian packaging producer Cascades and French housing developer Nexity, which caused the shares to de-rate.

We closed our position in financial conglomerate Japan Post Holdings at price target, following a strong rerating on the back of improved capital allocation and Japanese interest rates trending higher. We also added a position in the overlooked US regional bank Comerica. The regional bank has held an unfavourable position in swaps, which has reduced its net interest margin in the current rising interest rate environment. As this position expires, we believe the bank is well-positioned to increase its net interest margin and tangible book value in the coming years.
