Monthly commentary, May 2023

Global equities traded sideways in May as the debate around interest rate movements and inflation raged on. At sector level, artificial intelligence (AI) drove technology companies higher, although we take a measured view of the topic and see some of the current excitement and optimism as excessive. Commodity prices declined across the board.

SKAGEN Global underperformed the benchmark index in May. The fund ended the month ahead of its benchmark as measured over one year, five years and since inception.

The fund's top absolute performer was the search giant Alphabet (Google) which benefited from the overwhelmingly positive sentiment around AI. The worst performer in absolute terms was the premium cosmetics company Estee Lauder. The company reported weak quarterly figures as sales in China and Korea came in below expectations, leading to a third consecutive guidance cut. It is unusual to see a string of quarters with weak numbers and Estee Lauder's management seems at pains to explain it. We believe the current situation calls for sharper execution by the company. On the positive side, as shareholders, we are aligned with the controlling Lauder family, which cannot be pleased with the development. Additionally, the brands in the Estee Lauder palette remain strong and with a heightened focus on operational improvements, the risk-reward in the stock looks favourable for long-term investors.

Commentary on portfolio trading activity, if any, will follow at quarter end.
